Founded in 1968, the Goochland County Historical Society was established to collect, preserve, and interpret the history of Goochland County, Virginia. To fulfill its mission, the society has collected manuscripts, artifacts, genealogical, and architectural information pertaining to Goochland. These resources, some of them rare and unique, are made available to the public at the Society's Historical Center.

The Society annually publishes a magazine featuring original and previously unpublished articles and documents in order to preserve and interpret the history of the county. In addition to the magazine, the Society provides its membership with a newsletter which features current information on the Society's business, museum acquisitions, and the next scheduled program meeting.

Invite your friends to become new members of the Society. Consider giving your special friends a gift membership.
